

“Let’s Travel!”

Welcome. Most people from afar consider Chiang Mai’s big-city-small-town ambience quite intriguing – a balance between metropolitan energy and the nurturing support of a country town.

The question now may be: “What adventures will (and should) I undergo, and where will I push off to next?” Perhaps the soils of Myanmar (Burma), Malaysia, Laos, Cambodia or Vietnam are on the horizon.

Beyond this, how will you navigate your path when even reading street names, let alone requesting information (in English) from locals about the most wholesome places to visit, can be a challenge. Having a local friend would certainly help dissipate some of these pressures.

You may have taken notice of the gazillion tourism agencies lining Chiang Mai’s water moat. Most are pretty good. However, once you hand over that cash, what you will really experience is a mystery.

Perhaps consider not taking any chances, by tapping into the travel-knowledge of Prapanpong Deesri or Koo at Nara Tour in Chiang Mai. She is welcoming, warm-hearted, speaks English well and harnesses much in-depth experience regarding the destinations awaiting you.

Nara Tour was established in Chiang Mai about 20 years-ago. It was tailored primarily toward servicing in-bound tourists needing a local, friend-like contact – such as for airport pick-up, travel tour, hotel and airline booking arrangements. An issue was many people wanting to dart-off to other parts of Indo-China were likely required to chew up valuable time by first boarding a flight in Bangkok.

Therefore, airline companies, along with Nara Tour, about 10 years ago began increasingly using Chiang Mai as an extensive travel-hub for those wishing to thoroughly experience the unique, cultural diversity being offered throughout this part of the world. And Nara Tour has developed a solid reputation for being both reliable and affective at supporting people on this journey.

Take advantage of stress-free travel via pre-designed or individually tailored travel packages – with valuable information in-hand such as e-tickets, local guide and emergency contact information along with insider scoops into area attractions. Furthermore, visa matters can be a bit tricky in some countries such as Myanmar and Vietnam. Nara Tour will iron out these details.

Wish to make changes mid-tour? Fine. Koo, collaborating with local agency contacts amid whatever location you’re in, will continue making arrangements for you. You’re never on your own, and she follows up both during and after your tour.

Over the years, how has this service impacted people?

“They are happy to have seen something they have never seen before,” while creating profound, lifelong memories using “quality service at a reasonable price.”

Why invest your precious time and money into Nara Tour?

Firstly, being registered with the Tourism Authority of Thailand says a lot about Nara Tour’s service quality. Furthermore, this is Thailand. Trust that Nara’s Tour’s office being perched amid the grounds of Chiang Mai’s prominent Imperial Mae Ping Hotel reveals even more.

“If you (have) come to Chiang Mai, and you want to experience South-East Asia, please come to Nara Tour,” requests Koo. “We’re here for you. Let’s travel! Let’s experience more!”
