

T.Y.L Shipping:

An Offering of Home

After Wannalak Wannakoon, assistant manager with T.Y.L shipping, receives word from a satisfied client, her inner-response is, “When I see that they are happy, I am happy too!

“We want to service them...every shipment. It’s very good when it arrives at their home, and they say, ‘When I come to Thailand again, I will come see you, and we can work together.’”

T.Y.L – offering international air, sea as well as domestic, door-to-door shipping services – is conveniently situated amid the plethora of twinkling trinkets and handcrafted merchandise available at Baan Thawai village in Hang Dong.

Located on the outskirts of Chiang Mai, this settlement area is internationally renowned for its offering to tourists and merchants alike some of the world’s finest handicrafts – from ceramics, silverware and basketry, to hand-woven textiles and unique-to-Thailand mango wood carvings.

And with Baan in Thai meaning ‘home’ and Thawai denoting ‘to offer,’ perhaps its reasonable to proclaim that T.Y.L’s location brings to light that it is dedicated to assisting its clients with building and offering their home or business’ ambience to others, regardless of where on Planet Earth.

Wannalak says one way this is accomplished is via an in-depth consultation process, first involving the obvious: What do you want to ship; where and how? However, a further prime advantage of T.Y.L’s services – versus using the post office, for example – is there are no size or weight restrictions.

Therefore, if you wish to safely sail that gorgeous, wooden backyard swing from here to the States or Europe, fine; T.Y.L will thoroughly handle its journey, for you. And using one tracking number per shipment, regardless of how many items, provides for a checks-and-balances service quality system, throughout.

Another compelling component of T.Y.L’s services is its 12-year tenure of building business and personal relationships both here and afar (such as with DHL shipping), providing for a dynamic array of transport and storage options.

Perhaps you’ll be on your travel-journey for awhile longer before returning home. No problem. Store your goods amid one of T.Y.L’s well-staffed warehouses, or with DHL in your home-country.

Why not just work directly with a DHL office then? Well, beyond the personal touch related to partnering with T.Y.L’s amicable and professional staff, perhaps you have concerns related to overall shipping costs. Wannalak says merely using a DHL branch office will render you racking up a one-time shipping fee, versus taking fruitful advantage of T.Y.L’s more-local, “special price.”

Speaking of local, T.Y.L services all Thai provinces, filling-in geographic gaps where local shipping outlets aren’t accessible, such as in Phrae.

And while numerous other shipping companies are available in and around Chiang Mai, Wannalak says that experience continues revealing that you “Can trust that we are honest and have the best services.” And “It’s for the best price, so I am happy when a customer comes here.”
